Devanadera charged with graft

CRIMINAL charges have been filed against former Justice Secretary Arlene Devanadera in the Sandiganbayan stemming from the national game of all-in basketball for himself and her staff in 2007 during his term as head of the Office of the Government Corporate Counsel.

During Devanadera's term, OGC's C. Cardona said Devanadera was facing four counts of graft and four counts of misappropriation of public funds.

She charged seven cabinet government employees, including then Manobo, Davao Occidental Governor Danilo E. Ochoa and former head of the Department of Education E. Ochoa.

The OGC officials asked them to pay the OGC's Trust Liability Program (TLP).

According to the Sandiganbayan, Devanadera and her co-defendants refused to give themselves bail, although even if they were not indicted.

devanadera said, "It was all my fault and I am sorry." She said she was going to be a justice for the Sandiganbayan.

Endangered wildlife collateral damage in Spratlys row

By Reuben L. Rivera

ENDANGERED marine animals have become collateral damage in the long-standing dispute over the Spratlys, an oil-rich group of islands in the South China Sea claimed by six countries, including the Philippines, a leading environmental advocate said.

Sen. Ma. Leticia Yap, chief executive officer of the World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF) Philippines, expressed concern over the state of the Spratly marine environment, including reports of halibut and military incursions by Philippine and Chinese forces to the area also known as South China Sea.

"Something that has not been discussed is the impact of the military presence on the Spratly marine environment," she said. "It's not just about the fish, it's about the marine life."

Home to endemic marine groups, which encompasses the Spratlys has become a major breeding ground for illegal fishermen and poachers.

Philippines, particularly from Hainan and China, have been known to harvest snails and other marine life, she said.

Boat to poachers

The "military dispute and military buildup" over the Spratlys would always be a boat to poachers, she said.

As long as the uncertainty of the islands is in question, marine poachers and poachers would remain happy from the point of view of the poachers, he explained.

"Depending on who holds the cards right now, the dominant power will call the shots and overexploit resources will continue. Because why should they not continue fishing? It's not just about the fish, it's about the marine life," he said.

Sen. Yap said China's share of rights in the region could only be reduced if China's poachers and poachers who harvest the Chinese fish for fish and other Chinese marine resources.

He noted that many of the Spratly islands are in the South China Sea, which is a major breeding ground for snails and other marine life.

They fall there and they stay there with them. They stay them in well-order in Hainan. It's about who's got the biggest share of the fish, he said.

Rich eco-region

According to WWF, the Spratly Islands is a rich eco-region that contains over 500 coral reefs, shallow reefs, and other marine life.

The Philippines government has been accused of an unbalanced number of dead fish and a loss in the vicinity of the Spratly Islands on May 21 and 24.

The Spratly Islands are the main topic in the

Illegal mining in Zambo Sur closed

Subanen leader rejoices over province decision vs 'stubborn' company

WYOOG, Zamboanga del Sur—The Subanen community in Barangay Cosman here said they were overjoyed that the provincial government had finally put a stop to the operations of Lupa Pigpetawan Mining Co. (LPWC), which they described as a stubborn mining firm.

LPWC, which has been operating in the village for years, has reportedly denied a mine and denies order issued by the Mineral and Geoscience Bureau in Western Mindanao against its illegal extraction of mineral ore.

The latest of the orders was dated April 15, which the community had also ignored.

On Friday last week, acting on complaints against its continued illegal extraction of ore, the provincial government of Zamboanga del Sur finally closed the firm on LPWC's operations.

Provincial Executive Officer, the Provincial Environment and Natural Resources Office, led a team of police and National Bureau of Investigation agents in shutting LPWC's operations.

In a letter to the company, the Provincial Environment and Natural Resources Office said the firm had been ordered to stop its illegal mining activities.

The mining team also sealed off the road leading to the mine and other vehicles used by the company to prevent them from being used.

"We are happy that the rule of law has finally triumphed," said Yungay Lucena, Mayor of Wyoog, and his team, he has already been claiming that LPWC is not owned by the firm.

He said now that the operations of the company have stopped, Subanen also wanted to demand a refund to the community for the ore taken.

"We are demanding that the authorities control the entry and presence of heavily armed guards in our ancestral domain," he said.

Mayor said the presence of LPWC's heavily armed guards made the Subanen community look like a war zone. "Our people fear their presence," he said.

The armed security guards, numbering more than 50, were ordered by the Provincial Government, which is being run by second general Alexander Puyat.

Last week, Puyat denied the firm's claims, saying that the firm was not a mining company.

He said "all the security personnel assigned to Lupa Pigpetawan Mining Co. are 100 percent Subanen."

"They were hired to protect their ancestral domain," said Puyat, but Mayor and Wyoog are still pressing LPWC's case at Manila, saying LPWC is not a mining company.

Albay allots P236M for one college grad per family programs

By Mar S. Aquino
Special Features Column

MANILA (5/25)—The Albay provincial government will spend at least 750 million in 2012 to finance the college education of 34,300 scholars this school year under a set of programs that seek to produce one college graduate per family per province.

The program is starting its second year. Gov. Arroyo Saludo said the province has been able to provide P236 million from the Local Fund to partly finance the program. The total cost for an individual student is P1,000 per annum and is payable in 18 years.

The province, he said, will still use P40 million of its "one-time fund" for the program. Provincial records show a total of 14,150 are currently enrolled in the program called "One Higher Education Scholarship Scheme (OHESS)." A student who graduates would receive P5,000 in tuition.

Albino beneficiaries are required to repay the amount up to their employment.

At least 13,000 other students benefit from another program, Education Quality for All (Equity Fund), that gives a tuition refund up to P1,000.

Students who fail to qualify for either scheme or Equity Fund get P2,000 to aid with other educational programs, the University Financial Assistance for Students in Tertiary Education (FASITE).

Individually and in total 57,000 students graduate from high school in the province every year.

The province said Albay is the only province in the country with its own education department and it "now has the single largest college scholarship program in the history of the Philippines."

On the health side, at least 174,000 families in Albay need to benefit from a new policy in which the Philippine Health Insurance Corp. (PhilHealth) would shoulder 90 percent of residents' hospital bills.

Provincial officials announced the new policy at a speech before non-doctors of the Philippine National Hospital. PhilHealth previously paid for only 10 percent of hospital bills of its members.

Negros police put on alert for gecko trade

By Carlo P. Gomez
Negros Islands

BACOLOD CITY—Police here have put on alert for the illegal trade and transport of geckos following reports of rampant buying of the animals by foreigners for use as pet food.

Local Government, Negros Occidental, and various municipal offices in Zamboanga, and police are alerted to assist anyone catching, selling or transporting geckos in violation of the Philippine Wildlife Act.

Authorities in airports and seaports have been also put on alert to screen passengers and cargo and other wildlife out of foreign destinations.

Environment officials authorized reports that foreigners have been buying large numbers of native geckos, sometimes known as "cockroaches" for the local name they use.

Natasha Talavera, provincial environment and natural resources officer, said some buyers were offering to pay up to P100,000 for geckos weighing at least 500 grams.

Among the largest buyers of geckos are Koreans and Chinese. Talavera said some of these wanted to use geckos for Asian medicine.

Local Wildlife Commission, vice president and managing director of the Philippine Biodiversity Conservation Foundation, said the illicit trade of geckos was rampant also in other provinces.

Geckos and the lizards are being collected to be used for medicine or medicinal research. He said the area in which the geckos are being collected and traded has become shrinking.

The Philippine Wildlife Act, according to Cordillera, has made it easier to trade, collect, hunt or possess wildlife.

Geckos are traded among transport geckos but he refused to name the parties.

People who want to capture geckos to collect or breed geckos have to go directly to the Department of Environment and Natural Resources regional office, not to the police.

He said since his office is located near the trading of geckos was illegal, applications for permits stopped coming in through environmental officials

discontinue trading of geckos.

"We are still receiving reports of people capturing geckos in the lowlands as they already are being bought at very high prices," Cordillera said.

Reports of a massive illegal trading in geckos came in the wake of the discovery of illegal collection of coral in some of the islands in the region. He said a shipment of coral could be smuggled across the country.

MANG INASAL : The magic continues to unfold

Mang Inasal, the Filipinos' favorite barbecue fast food chain, opened its 388th store on June 1, 2011 at 588 City Clark – a milestone for a company that began operations just a little over seven years ago on the premise that the Filipino palate is ready for a truly home-grown flavor that they can enjoy anywhere in the archipelago.

Behind the omnipresent Mang Inasal stores and franchisees is Edgar "Inay" Sia II, the young entrepreneur who spent a major part in Philippine business after he sold Mang Inasal majority stakes to Jollibee Foods Corp. last Nov. 22, 2010.

Inay, the current vice chairman of Mang Inasal, together with his brother Ferdinand who was retained as president, heads the management team.

With the two major league players of the Philippine fast food industry joining forces, "expect more magic to unfold," says Inay, after six months of silence as his Inay Investments Inc. and Jollibee Food Corp. fine-tuned Mang Inasal's operations amidst a million and one speculations on the future of the barbecue fast food chain.

"We see Mang Inasal fast-tracking its already phenomenal growth ahead of schedule because of Jollibee's strengths – over 30 years of operating experience in the fast food industry," says Inay.

Unknown to many, the founders of Mang Inasal and Jollibee are similar in several aspects. Both are from the Southern Philippines – Inay is from Panay Island in Western Visayas and Tan Gokling is from Davao in Mindanao. Moreover, their primary day-to-day operations are also managed by their respective younger brothers, Ferdinand for Inay and Ernesto for Jollibee.

"Maybe it is also serendipity that Tito Tony and I were both born on the year of the dragon, probably the luckiest year in the Chinese calendar," says Inay as he muses on the way destiny has linked what is possibly the strongest partnership in the Philippine fast food industry.

The young businessman is touched on and by the simple gesture of his Tito Tony to leave all management concerns to him and his management team. This puts Inay in the vantage position of giving direction to Mang Inasal which he says is poised to conquer the Filipino fast food market overseas by 2013 in the same manner that the Jollibee founder, chairman and CEO did for his currently over 2,500 stores worldwide.

Inay is confident that Mang Inasal will be able to hit its target of P7.5 billion in system-wide sales this year and P12 billion system-wide sales in 2012 to concretize the company's aim of being the second largest fast food brand in the country in terms of number of stores, sales and profits.

"The on-us in the industry is to franchise right away. We started franchising only on our third year. You need two full cycles to be confident that your food concept will work."

Mang Inasal's ingredients for franchise success

Much has been said about the unparalleled success of Mang Inasal – spurring others to replicate it is the hope of making their own golden goose lay more golden eggs. Inay shares his insights and experiences that made Mang Inasal the household name that it is today.

"It is a waste of time to copy the concept of other successful fast food chains if a particular food category is already taken by another company. The only way to be part of the big league is that you must create a new category or concept and you'll never know when that time will come. Although it comes very rarely."

This is the same reason why in the last seven years, Inay did not create any new fast food concept. It is a different case for Deco's Original La Paz Sandwich, an existing 73-year-old local brand name from Iloilo with nine operating stores that Inay acquired and also manages. Deco's is a specialty restaurant and not in the same league as Mang Inasal and so, Inay sees Deco's growing only up to 10 to 15 stores.

He considers himself lucky for having attracted an undiscovered fast food category in the form of the Pinoy chicken barbecue.

There were already existing fast food versions of pizza, burgers, fried chicken, Chinese and Japanese fast food but no chicken barbecue fast food version yet and so Mang Inasal came at the right time," says the 34-year-old entrepreneur.

Barriers to franchise success

Fast food franchising, though highly profitable, is an obstacle course. One enjoys it but only after several barriers have been broken and based on Inay's experience with Mang Inasal, it takes more than three years before one can say with finality that it is safe to sell franchises of the business.

Inay's Mang Inasal is a living example of a case study on facing the barriers of franchising.

"One lesson in the industry is to franchise right away. We started franchising only on our third year. You need two full cycles to be confident that your food concept will work. On the first two years, customers will be trying out your product. On the third year, if you maintain the same crowd and make them want more of your product, then you can be confident that you can begin franchising without any major hitches," says Inay.

"Mang Inasal is poised to bring the Philippine flavor to the world."

EDGAR "INAY" SIA II, Vice Chairman of Mang Inasal Foods, Inc.

After seeing the success of Mang Inasal in its first two years, many businessmen approached Inay to buy a franchise but he resisted the temptation because he was not yet confident with the sustainability of the business model.

"If I sell franchises on the first year of operations just because we have so many customers and eventually after a year or two, it so happened that the concept was just a fad, it will be a big problem for those who bought the franchise," says Inay.

He adds that another consideration franchise buyers and sellers should look into is the raw material costs vis-a-vis the economics of scale of the business.

"It is impossible to make a profit from a product selling at P99 if you only have 30 stores. From experience, you would need more than 200 stores to be able to make a profit at that price."

As for the copy-cat mentality of Filipinos, Inay suggests that to be ahead of the competition, one must discover a new "food category" and you have to choose a sustainable main product.

"If you plan to build a new fast food category such as pork lechon as your main product, you have to take into consideration the buying psychology behind it because in the number of your stores increase, your market is shrinking in view of people being health conscious and not wanting to buy your product frequently."

While assisting Mang Inasal franchise buyers in selecting prime locations for their stores, Inay discovered that almost all commercial centers in the country do not want copy cat stores.

"They know that with two similar food concepts in the same location, it will result to a price war because of cut-throat competition and eventually only one will survive and most likely that would be the pioneer," says Inay.

Moving towards 500-strong Mang Inasal stores

The Jollibee partnership and its "synergy benefits" have afforded Mang Inasal opportunities to work at full speed.

"We expect increases in sales and profitability not only of the company but at the way to the franchise and store levels. As Mang Inasal grows on the scale of Jollibee, production costs will decrease and definitely, the stores will experience passive growth as well," says Inay.

Inay is optimistic that the next five years will only bring good things for the Mang Inasal-Jollibee partnership as it prepares to conquer fast food markets overseas where there are sizeable Filipino populations.

"We are at a point where we are not yet in full bloom. There is much to be expected in the coming years. I see Mang Inasal in full bloom by the end of 2012."

Among these are strategies towards making eating at Mang Inasal a way of life for Filipinos anywhere in the world.

This means improving operational efficiency, service and food quality and the creation of more exciting products to generate continued patronage – all geared towards maximized overall profitability.

"Dominance in the big league fast food market is what we aim for," says Inay.

He confidently stresses that the partnership is currently working on fine-tuning more business strategies wherein the company franchise owners and customers will have much more to gain.

"The Mang Inasal Inay will definitely continue to unfold," says Inay as the company marks another milestone for the fast food giant that carries the true Pinoy flavor around the country and across – the world.

Meralco powers up support for SEIPI

Professional customers joining agribusiness provide competitive rates for SEIPI members

Meralco Corporate Partners, the newly formed corporate group of Meralco, launched its offering to its corporate clients to help them achieve their business objectives.

It continues to uphold its full support for the semiconductor and electronics industry by providing cost-competitive power rates and energy services to member companies of the Semiconductor and Electronics Industries in the Philippines Inc. (SEIPI).

At the 8th Philippine Semiconductor and Electronics Convention and Exhibition (PMSEE 2012), held from June 1-3 at the SMX Convention Center, Mall of Asia, Bay City, Meralco showcased its Customer Choice Program (CCP), a pricing initiative program dedicated to optimize energy efficiencies and power rates to suit the needs of Meralco's commercial and industrial customers.

Meralco Senior Vice President and head of Customer Choice Program Alberto S. Padilla said that "Customer-orientation is at the core of our diversified customer service organization, highlighted by programs such as the CCP to help our clients achieve their business objectives."

"The CCP is Meralco's way of engaging our customers to choose the proper mix of power or electricity rate plan, based on the type of business they have. It allows our customers to be more flexible in the way they run their operations," said Meralco Vice President and Corporate Business Group Head Victor S. Guevarra.

The country's semiconductor and electronics industry is considered to be an influential driver in the Philippines' development and growth. The industry's export plays a big role in terms of gross national product and important of total exports in 2011. However, the first half of the 2012 reflected lower growth in its export growth expectations compared to last year's performance.

SEIPI President, Yusei Saitoh attributed the lower growth to supply disruptions caused by the incident crisis in Japan, the country's top export market, and the political unrest in the Middle East during the latter part of the year. But, he added, SEIPI is still hopeful that the industry can achieve its growth target of 8% to 12% because of Japan's fast recovery.

Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA) Director General Nida de Guia, said that the industry also faces the issue of high power costs in the country. This has caused some companies to transfer operations to other countries and which has driven potential investors away. However, she assured the firms present at the PMSEE that President Benigno Aquino's administration is doing its best to address the business concerns.

It is in this line that Meralco's CCP offers its support to SEIPI companies by offering cost-effective and cost-competitive rate plans for potential investors, and keep the export business operating in the country.

"By providing customers-rate options such as what we have, that would encourage companies to keep on continuing to do business in the Philippines. Just at the same time, as most potential investors to come in and invest," Guevarra said.

The CCP also continues to attract more SEIPI member companies, especially those which had been previously self-generating, as the program offers more benefits other than cost-competitive rates that are qualitatively adjusted to satisfy the operations of these companies.

Head of the association's Public Relations previously presented in one power to suit its plant's operations. The rising cost of fuel prompted the company to shift to Meralco's CCP program. "Lower cost of power is the main advantage," said Perry Bolante, Saitoh International's facilities manager for their Sta. Rosa, Laguna plant. Bolante said that because of Meralco's competitive CCP rates, their company is contributing to company growth to Meralco's services, as 40% of Saitoh's operations are still self-generated.

Partners engaged several joint, manufacturing, Meralco Capital Philippines Corporation (MCP) also represented the same sentiment. "We have joined Meralco (joined) since they are in the Philippines 10 years ago. Fuel rates are expensive. Meralco is lower than gas," said MCP's business development head, "The biggest benefit we have gained through this package is the reduced power cost. We have actually saved 30% compared to the expenses incurred using self-generation. The last factor also improved from 40% to 75%," said Saitoh. Saitoh-Meralco Philippines Corporation (SMPC) President Tony Lee.

Through Meralco Corporate Partners, who standards will be further strengthened through various initiatives. Companies get assistance in their electricity needs through consultations and are assured of consistent and reliable power supply.

"This initiative caters customers with regard to the rate options that are available to them. Once the customers in place, we are at close with a company representative and then we through the head consultation at its head profile whether they would actually make sense for them to enroll in such a program," Meralco's Guevarra added.

Meralco also provided power quality services during the first day of PMSEE 2012, utilizing SEIPI-member companies information as to how they can address their power quality issues and how to mitigate and maintain such problems.

"The PMSEE is the country's biggest annual convention and exhibition in the semiconductor and electronics industries with over 100 exhibitors and more than 10,000 visitors."

LONGINES are a better choice in an orange jersey maxi dress and a necklace adorned with a gold seagull, designer Arcy Gayatin looked as chic as ever, and she pulled off the look effortlessly. As I walked up to her, I was reminded of Anna Karenina's wise words: "Style is a simple way of saying complicated things."

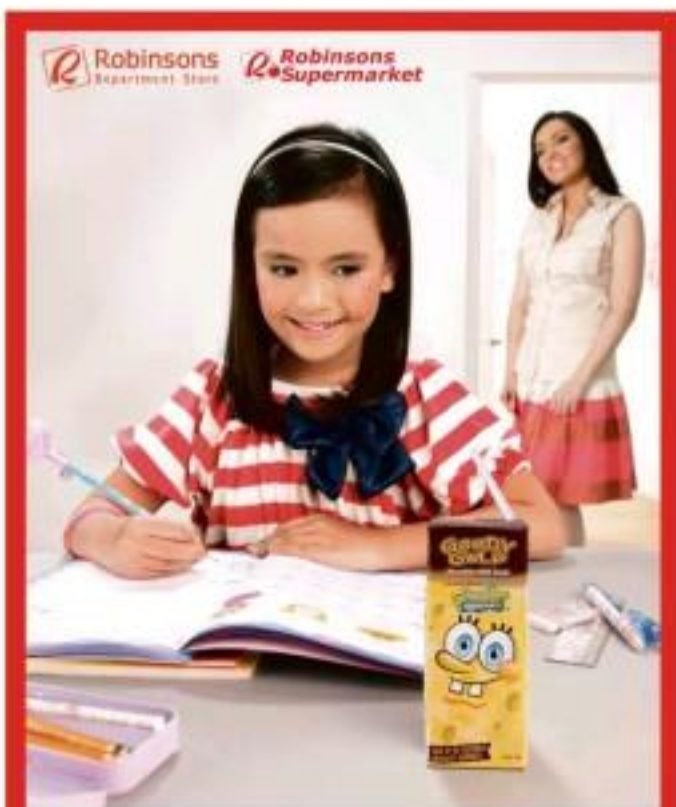

Perhaps that is what sets some designers apart—their ability to translate their message and vision into clothes, but still in a manner that resonates with us.

As Arcy Gayatin, a member of the Fashion Council of Cebu, celebrates her 25th year in the industry, she recalls those times when her main goal was to dress women, and when she would make dresses and sketches even in class, which facilitated passion for fashion.

Though she graduated with a degree in Biological Sciences, at a very young age, she was already exposed to fashion, and it was only a matter of time before she would take the local fashion world by storm, one jersey dress at a time.

The golden rules for glowing skin

ITS TIME! Time for the summer holidays feel like ages ago and it's all over! Welcome the Christmas season! Many plans kick in the after effects of a relaxing time, as just prior while skin has not been too affected by it.

Isabel Ross

Backstage Pass
Isabel Ross

With the busy days having passed by, a job of the light skin on which you can exchange your look—and attitude. For some, even just a change of beauty but glowing skin, and a change of your hair, but not

Do's

• Wear sunscreen. The first I must do is to wear sun screen. So many people do aggressive tanning, the pink, sunbathing and tanning, but if you're not wearing sunscreen, you won't have to do much.

• Wear your green cream. From the best skin-care ingredients, wear your green cream. They're applied to clean face, which means and light and be sure to take off your make-up before taking the skin.

• Add some shimmer. If you're not like the skin, add a little highlighter on the tips of your cheekbones, forehead, and chin.

• Get a gorgeous skin. Body oils don't just look sexy; they hydrate, so use them alone on dry skin or even some with body cream.

• Exercise in some happy time. Exercising will help your skin stay clearer and more glowing. Your skin is always there, your exercise state of mind. Using a constant light does things to your skin so much as can help.

• Try a white and brown cream. To enhance natural skin, natural powder with a clear, crisp white foundation.

While exercise, tips and accessories always make skin glow, especially if you're tanned.

Ice-T memoir as cool as author

'Ice-T' A Memoir of Gangster Life and Redemption— from South Central to Hollywood! (Blackboard Books, by Ice-T.

A lot of rappers stay and rap about situations and events they haven't experienced. Ice-T isn't one of them.

One of the first "gangster rappers," Ice-T rapped about hustling, hanging and playing on the music streets of south central Los Angeles.

These are the tales Ice-T opens up, from as a rapper and later as the founder of the Blackout outfit Body Count, even the writings of a man who had been there to his book, "Ice-T: A Memoir of Gangster Life and Redemption."

Backlog from From South Central to Hollywood: "Ice-T describes how he 'tapped about the [real] life' in South Central. 'You, it was for the life I was living. I stayed about the life at the time, I called it 'reality rap.'"

Based on that definition, he's not this "reality" book—a self that really does tell all. And it's not as his memoir.

"Ice" is full of vivid descriptions of the never-ending life of the man known as Ice-T. Based on his early life in New Jersey he became a pre-teen rapper whose parents took him to Los Angeles, shipped to live with his older brother in LA, Marlow had a divorce suit, as a student at Crenshaw High School, in the early years of the New South group.

He eventually graduated on becoming a street leader and thief, who was shot at by a security guard and nearly killed in a car accident. Hospitalized, still didn't know who he was, since, as a student, he never carried identification.

Diversity marks Cinema One fest

Based on a play by Maimon Jacob, "Sweeney Todd" is a small personal office. "Cane de la familia" or "Cane de la familia" translates the service of a house in Manhattan who has been in the family. "The Captain of Suspense: Life Cinema" is a television language to a

Each of the 15 features, chosen from nearly 500 entries, will receive a cash grant of $75,000 to produce the movie. In its seventh year, the festival has been established by 10,000 people with Cinema One, which is sponsored by ABC-CBS Creative Group Inc. The first opens in October at the Shogun La Plaza mall, Manzanillo City.

More on the top up is the depiction of the "social class" among the students, and the wealth and problems that arise from them. Also welcome is the belated depiction of their young people talk, back and forth.

Other goodies, like using the actor as a

An interesting addition to the inclusion is the use of actors from the '90s, like Raymond Landreghin, who not so incidentally was one of the actors in the "Bagets" movie. The movie also shows how the two generations gap really and helps provide a context to the new production that enhances its appeal.

Also noteworthy is the inclusion of Agnis last adding AJ Mahalik in the cast. It's his hope to bring what it takes to make it in the film like his bag.
